Don't Wake the Yeti

Written By Claire Freedman

If you think there's a yeti curled under your bed,
Don't scream or panic. Don't lose your head.
As yetis, you know are most terribly rare,
First check that it's not something else hiding there.

Like those polar bear slippers you kicked on the floor,
Or the duvet that Mum couldn't fit in the drawer.
Oh dear, so you've checked,
and it couldn't be that,
And the furry white mound is too huge for a cat.

Oh ikes – it's a yeti – but phew there's good news:
Those loud snuffly snores mean he's having a snooze.
You've now time to think of what action to take.
STOP! What are you doing?
Don't poke him awake!

You've given your yeti a fright – that's not right.
Tell him you're sorry, say humans don't bite!
BUT if he still finds your lampshade appealing,
Show him it's safe to come down from the ceiling.

Great! Now you're friends. GRRRRR! Is his tummy growling?
Quick! Time to feed him, before he starts howling.
Best use a napkin to catch splots and splurps,
And remember that yetis grin THANK YOU in BURPS!

After you've cleaned up, he'll need a COLD bath.
He'll wear your mum's bath-hat, it's kind not to laugh.
Top up with ice cubes but don't even try
To stay in the room when he shakes himself dry.

Of course, you'll be shouting, I've got school, I'll be late.
He'll beg to go with you, your brand new classmate.
The teacher might think he's your "bring and show" pet –
Your friends will gasp, "WOW! he's the funniest yet!"

He'll eat all the slugs on the playground – Ugh! Yuck!
and don't let him loose on the slide – he'll get stuck!
He'll make loud embarrassing noises – Phoo-h-eeee!
But always be polite, he'll grin, "Oops, pardon me!"

You should be aware – if you take Yeti shopping,
He'll munch all the food till his tummy is popping,
Then squeeze in the freezer (as yetis love snow)
And make a great fuss when you say, "Time to go!"

All yetis, unfortunately, have TONS of fleas –
The tickle his tummy, and big knobby knees.

He'll ask you to scratch him for itchy relief.

Take note! If he eats some, you must brush his teeth.

By now you'll be asking, "Help! What will Mum say?"

"A huge hairy yeti – he can't stay! No way!"

The fact is that yetis are great at disguise.

He's a chair, then a rug – in a flash of Mum's eyes.

Though keeping a yeti won't suit everyone,
They're cuddly and silly and they're friendly and fun.
and things could be MUCH worse, if under your bed ...

You find a huge dinosaur hiding instead!
